

(26)

Unit-5

C.O

(Ms. Shubhangi Sharma)

Peripheral Devices

- Peripheral devices are the computer devices that are connected to the computer externally such as printer, scanner, keyboard, mouse, magnetic disks and tapes, microphone and external modem.
- They can be internal such as CD-ROM or internal modem and external as the scanner or printer. Peripheral devices can be classified according to their functions.

Input - Input devices are the type of computer devices that are used to provide the control signals to the computer.
Ex: Keyboard and Mouse.

Output - Output devices are the devices that are used to display the results. Ex: Printer, scanner, speaker, Monitor.

Storage - A storage device is a device that is used to store the information such as hard disk drive, flash drive, floppy disk and the tape drive.

Input - Output (I/O) Interface